

WHEREIN ENGLISH FAILS.

Other Lovers of French.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to Professor Oberfohren's letter stating that Germany leads other non-French-speaking countries in the appreciation of French literature, does he not forget Russia, Rumania, Hungary, and Italy? And is there not more French read and spoken in German and Austria, Poland, and in Bohmen and Mahren (Bohemia and Moravia) than in the non-Slavic portions of Germany and Austria? ROBERT GRIMSHAW,
New York University, Nov. 1, 1915.

The New York Times

Copyright © The New York Times
Originally published November 4, 1915